Jewish Families of Orangeburg: Links in a Chain

By Rhetta Aronson Mendelsohn

In 2002, in connection with the exhibition “A Portion of the People: Three Hundred Years of Southern Jewish Life,” the Jewish Historical Society of South Carolina published a wonderful brochure entitled A Guided Tour of Jewish Community Life, Past and Present. Towns from Beaufort in the lowcountry to Rock Hill in the upstate were listed as places with sites of Jewish interest. All the synagogues in South Carolina also were listed.

Jewish residents of Orangeburg were quick to note, however, that no mention was made of their town and their synagogue was not on the list. In actuality, Orangeburg has a long and illustrious Jewish history. Founded in 1735, the town was named for William, Prince of Orange, and settled by German-speaking immigrants who were coming to South Carolina for economic opportunity as well as religious freedom. Apparently by the mid 1800s, German- or Yiddish-speaking Jews felt comfortable in Orangeburg and even smaller towns nearby—maybe because there was no language barrier.

Today, the Hebrew Cemetery, adjacent to Sunnyside Cemetery on Summers Avenue, bears quiet testimony to more than 130 Jews who lived and worked in Orangeburg and vicinity.

The Sunnyside Cemetery Company was organized on April 13, 1886, with the Hebrew Benevolent Society named as part of the organizing group. At some point, the Benevolent Society withdrew from the organization and operated its burial ground independently. Today the entire 15 acres is maintained by the City of Orangeburg as a city cemetery.

The first Jewish burial was Hirsh (Herman) Marcus, who died June 25, 1890, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Solomon (Hanna) Link. A native of Posen, Germany, he had been in America for only 11 years. Mrs. Link buried her husband in December of that same year. There are at least ten other people with the name of Marcus in the cemetery, including Miss Evelyn Marcus, who in 1920 became the first woman admitted to the South Carolina Bar. Milton Marcus, a retired merchant, his wife, daughter, and grandchildren still reside in Orangeburg.

The Marcus family seems to be tied to the Rich family through the marriage of Hannah Rich to Mitchell Marcus. Hannah came from Prussia as a girl of 13 with her parents Lipman and Eva Rich. By 1855, they had arrived in Charleston, where they joined the newly established “Polish and German” congregation, Berith Shalome. Lipman and son Philip were elected officers of that synagogue in 1860 and 1865, respectively, but it appears that parts of the family had moved on to St. Matthews and Orangeburg by that time.

Hannah’s other brother Moritz and his wife Bertha had five children and one of those children, Isadore, married Reka Brown, who bore six more Riches. Needless to say, there are many members of this family buried in Orangeburg. Sadly, in January of 2004, my mother Rose Louise Rich Aronson became the fourth generation of this family to be laid to rest in Sunnyside Cemetery. Several descendants of the Rich family now live in Charleston, including Reka Rich Demasi, Carol Aronson Kelly, and the author.

Other names in the cemetery include Wald, Gilman, Kahnweiler, Kohn, Baum, Wolfe, Bamberg, Nussbaum, Benjamin, Goldiner, Kline, Jarecky, and Pearlstine. The early German Jews clearly were joined by Jews from Poland and Russia in the twentieth century.

Through marriage, the Jewish families from Orangeburg have ties to Jewish families all over South Carolina—the Baruchs and Hirschs of Camden, the Aronsons of Kingstree, the Furchgotts of Charleston, to name a few. As elsewhere, most heads of these households were merchants, but their numbers also included lawyers, doctors, dentists, musicians, cotton brokers, bankers, soldiers, and teachers.

One Confederate soldier, Theodore Kahn, is of particular note, having fought at Morris Island, Seessionville, Battery Wagener, and Ft. Sumter in the “War for Southern Independence,” as it was called in the Orangeburg newspaper in 1902. In his obituary that year, Mr. Kahn was extolled as “one of Orangeburg’s most prominent and useful citizens.” He had been an alderman of the City, an organizer of the Edisto Bank, and the “father of the Orangeburg Graded Schools.” He served on the school board until his death.

In 1980, when Joseph Jerome Miller, the only Jewish person in Ellerree, South Carolina, passed away, he had not a relative in the world. At his funeral in Orangeburg, many citizens of Ellerree, both white and black, came to show their respect. He left money to many Jewish organizations, and also to every church in Ellerree.

When Edward Mirmow died at the age of 95 in 1995, he was eulogized as a founder of the Orangeburg-based First National Bank and the instrumental force behind the organization of American Legion Baseball. He lettered at the University of South Carolina in baseball and football. He was married to Rebekah Blatt of Blackville, sister of Solomon Blatt, who served in the state legislature for 54 years and as Speaker of the House for more than three decades.

In the mid 20th century at least 15 stores on the main street in Orangeburg were owned by Jewish families. Today those stores are all closed—some victims of their own success. The children of these merchants went away to college and did not return to Orangeburg. This, of course, is the story of many Jewish families in small towns across the South and the nation.

Orangeburg’s Temple Sinai, built in the 1950s and still in use today, has never had a regular rabbi, but visiting rabbis and local residents, including the late J. J. (“Jimmy”) Teskey, conducted services and taught the religious school for many years.
Perhaps through this article, Orangeburg will gain a rightful place in South Carolina’s Jewish history. Hopefully the remaining Jewish residents of Orangeburg will be proud to be recognized as an important link in the story.

Written with gracious and plentiful help from the Orangeburg County Historical Society and dedicated to the memory of Hugo Ackerman, history teacher at Orangeburg High School and founder of the Historical Society.

Dear Rhetta:

I have recently spoken with Lib Osborne who was married to Sidney Kline. She told me that Lillian Kline, who was Sidney's first wife, died in Chicago, Illinois. Her dates are November 25, 1909 to February 11, 1991. You probably could find the name of the newspaper in Chicago on the Internet and they would possibly send you a copy of her obituary.

Also, Lib said that Leonard E. Kline who died on October 28, 2002, lived in Goose Creek, SC at the time of his death. You could go to the Charleston County Library and find his obituary on file there. They are very helpful.

I don't think that I have any other ideas at this time on the others we could not locate but if anything comes up, you'll be the first to know. Good luck!

I have seen your dad several times recently and I think he looks good. We have had a couple of good conversations. I'm so glad that I have been able to say “thank you” to him personally.

Yours very truly,

Dear Rhetta:

In re: Information about those buried in the Hebrew Cemetery, Orangeburg, SC

Dear Rhetta:

Please find enclosed in alphabetical order copies of obituaries from the files at the OCHS. Also we have searched the microfilm at the Orangeburg County Public Library, Richland County Public Library and the South Carolina Archives in Columbia, SC. You will note that some of the copies are from the death certificate files at the State Archives. The death certificates are interesting in that they show the names of the parents of the decedent. We also have included some general information of interest from our files (old city directories), when we could find it, on those buried at Sunnyside Hebrew Cemetery. Also there are a few obituaries we found that indicated the person is buried at Hebrew Cemetery but apparently do not have markers so they are not in our cemetery list.

We have included several pages which will be of interest to you; the marriage of your parents, your birth announcement and the birth announcement of your daughter. Just couldn’t resist sending you these.

We have failed to locate any information on some of those buried in the Hebrew Cemetery. A list of those buried (highlights indicate those which we located) is attached to help you with your further search. Our suggestion to you would be to look in the microfilm of the Charleston papers in the County Library and if you have a contact in the Augusta, GA area (or check with the public library in Augusta and see if they have someone) who will search for you as we feel some of these people may have died in that area and it was put in their newspaper and not in ours. You may know some of the heirs of others that can help you with location of death.

We have removed Herman Wald on page 213 and Morris Speisman on page 217 as they were listed twice. Also we have removed Mrs. J. W. H. Dukes as she is buried in another part of the cemetery. We have added the following:

3. Page 216, 21 (2) - GOLDINER, Algie M. Bray, Born February 10, 1906 Died October 26, 1987;
5. Page 217, 23 (2) - MIRMOW, Rebecca Blatt, Born August 14, 1904 Died October 13, 1999;

On page 221 we had a typographical error in #18, HARMON, Minnie R. (Not B) and we have changed that error.

We have had a great time working on this for you and we are enclosing a bill for copies only. Please let us know if you need anything further. Best of luck to you in your project statewide and please remember us with a copy of the final results. It would be a great asset for us to have in our files for those doing research on their genealogy.

Yours very truly,

Nancy T. Faulling
